Inspiration leads to recovery

By Staff Sgt. Tammie Clark
355th Wing Public Affairs

Many people have never stopped to reflect on the thought that a life can be dramatically altered in the time it takes to blink.

For many Airmen, Sailors, Soldiers and Marines serving in the war on terror, this thought is a daily reality. The dangers of survival in a war torn area are something that military members have been training to face since the moment they stepped off the bus at basic training, officer field training or officer candidate school.

But some things can not be taught at these training facilities. Service before self, unrelenting duty to country and dedication to the team are things which are naturally ingrained into only a select few individuals.

Members of the wing reach out to local community

When a cry for help came from the Tucson community, members of the 355th Wing staff showed what it takes to be leaders and answered the call.

"We heard the Mobile Meals [of Tucson] had a driver shortage," said Lt. Col. David Eisenstadt, 355th Wing Manpower Office chief. "They had the dollars to pay for the meals but no way of getting them to folks who needed them. The wing staff decided to step in and help cover the shortage for three months to give Mobile Meals time to recruit more drivers."

According to their fact sheet, Mobile Meals is the primary agency delivering special diet meals to the homebound in the Tucson community. Their client base of nearly 200 is supplied with two meals each day meaning more than 1,800 meals are delivered each week.

With that many meals to deliver, finding drivers can be a challenge. But members of the wing were all too happy to volunteer.

"The response from the wing staff has been overwhelming," said Colonel Eisenstadt. "I've heard nothing but favorable comments from our drivers. They get to see first hand how their participation can make a difference in the local community."

And according to Tech. Sgt. Heidi Gygi, 355th Wing Manpower analyst, the Mobile Meals program helps develop Airmen by teaching them what an impact they can have on another person's life.

"Stepping outside yourself always benefits a person internally," said Sergeant Gygi. "It Airmen participating in the operational readiness exercise are reminded to stay hydrated. Wearing the battle dress overgarment or the joint lightweight integrated suit technology overgarment can add extra stress on the body during the already hot Tucson summer weather. Keep canteens full of water and drink water often. Water sources will be available to refill canteens.

D-M to 'Push It Up' through 2004

By Col. Larry Stutzriem
355th Wing Commander

At Davis-Monthan Air Force Base, we are off to a rocketing start transitioning our warrior culture making physical fitness a pillar to developing and nurturing Airmen, from airman basic to three-stars. Quite simply, fitness is about being ready to deploy and to fight when called.

As we approach the six month point in the first transitional year of the new Air Force fitness program, it's clear that unit and individual participation is now a way of life at D-M.

To accommodate the increase in fitness activity across the installation, we've expanded fitness center hours, built two new running paths, refreshed equipment and facilities at the Haeffner Fitness Center and established recognition programs for superior fitness performers.

During this time, the staffs of our Fitness and Health and Wellness Centers have enthusiastically underpinned our efforts by capturing top HAWC in Air Combat Command and the fitness facility championing ACC's first and only five-star fitness center rating.

Their innovations have been powerful across the installation with programs like Fitness Boot Camp, Lightning Fit Conditioning Guide and the Air Force Fitness Test Instructional Video.

Our greatest indicator of success was when Gen. Hal Hornburg, ACC commander, saw our world-class facilities and fitness programs during his visit last December. General Hornburg, a leader who walks the talk when it comes to physical training, asked for a Davis-Monthan T-shirt before he left so he could wear it at other bases when he worked out. His reason — he wanted Airmen across ACC to ask him why so he could say, "When you have it together like D-M, I'll wear your shirt."

But now, at the six month point, is the time to 'Push It Up': June 1, we will kick off our 'Push It Up' campaign. Currently, over 30 percent of the installation has tested with an astounding 92 percent pass rate! By the end of 2004 our goal is to have all Airmen warriors meeting or exceeding the Air Force fitness standards. This will require creativity from commanders and dedication by all to meet this goal.

I'm overwhelmed by the creativity of some of the commanders on the installation as they meet this challenge head on. For example, the 25th Operational Weather Squadron runs 11 PT sessions a week to accommodate three PT sessions for their squadron while still conducting their training/operational missions. The 355th Communication Squadron has mandatory unit PT three times a week in the morning. The 755th Operations Support Squadron conducts squadron PT twice a week and self PT once a week. The 355th Aerospace Medicine Squadron conducts unit PT once a week and allows for self-PT twice a week. The 355th Component Maintenance Squadron accomplishes group PT four times a week to accommodate their shift operations. Finally, the 355th Contracting Squadron and 355th Mission Support Squadron have dove-tailed a scavenger hunt concept into their PT program where they run to different agencies across the installation collecting small items while other stops may require them to do push-ups or sit-ups — best time wins!

In all these initiatives, the approach is clear and simple — regular participation in physical training a minimum or three times a week.

As Gen. George Patton once said, "Accept the challenge so that you can feel the exhilaration of victory." Lets 'PUSH IT UP!'

D-M, community team up to save lives

The 355th Security Forces have joined military personnel and law enforcement across the nation for the 2004 "Click It or Ticket" campaign Monday through June 6, and the "You Drink and Drive. You Lose." campaign Aug. 27 through Sept. 12.

After the 2003 "Click It or Ticket" mobilization, National Highway Traffic Safety Administration announced that the national seat belt use rate jumped from 75 to 79 percent. There are still 21 percent of drivers who don't buckle up.

Everyone should be aware of the stepped up enforcement on base and in the surrounding communities. The campaign expects more than 13,000 law enforcement agencies around the country to join this effort.

For more information about the "Click It or Ticket" or "You Drink and Drive. You Lose." campaigns contact the 355th SFS NCO in charge of police services, Tech. Sgt. Ryan Holm, at 228-2109.

Programs nurture expectant parents

By Senior Airman Brandy Dupper-Macy
355th Wing Public Affairs

It seems like yesterday when you first found out that you were expecting a new baby. The time sure has flown by.

You've told family and friends, heard the heart beat, seen the little person that resides in your belly, bought all the decor and furniture for the nursery, baby clothes, diapers and toys just for fun. Now it's just a matter of sitting and waiting for the due date to come.

But what happens after the baby is born? Some new parents may be so caught up in planning that they may not know about the free programs and classes available at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base or of the paperwork that needs to be completed once the newborn arrives, such as enrolling a child into Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System and TRICARE Prime.

"The family advocacy offers the New Parent Support Program," said Tracy Canter, 355th Medical Operations Squadron Family Advocacy Program assistant. "The New Parent Support Program is a voluntary program for soon-to-be and new parents to assist them in handling pregnancy, birth and infant care up through the first three years of life. The program offers many support services and referrals to assist parents in adjusting to their new baby."

According to Ms. Canter, the NPSP can provide referrals to on and off-base community support agencies such as Women, Infants, and Children; a program that assists lower income families in purchasing important nutritional foods.

"The New Parent Support Program nurtures Airmen by teaching parenting skills that promote successful parenting," Ms. Canter said. "Airmen who have never parented before run the risk of unintentionally injuring their infant. The transition to parenthood is a stressful time for anyone, but if Airmen are better informed, they can parent with greater confidence. This improves their frame whether at home or at work."

"Family Advocacy also offers couples counseling which can be very helpful when families are expecting a baby and dealing with many new changes in their family dynamics," Ms. Canter said.

Classes in breast feeding, parenting, Baby Basics and anger management are also offered by the family advocacy.

The Baby Basics class goes over what to expect when parents have their first baby and includes solutions or ideas to possible problems they may face.

Though all the classes welcome the dad-to-be, none invite the dad more than Dad's Baby Boot Camp where expectant dads put on suits that simulate pregnancy and learn information on parenting.

"Dad's Baby Boot Camp is a great activity that receives high praise from attendees," Ms. Canter said. "This activity is one every expectant dad should put on his calendar."

"There truly is no one best program at Davis-Monthan because all the programs work in concert together meeting various parenting needs," said Maj. Kathie Rearden, 355th MDOS Family Advocacy officer.

Parents are sometimes so wrapped up and exhausted from getting little sleep with their newborn they may forget to get necessary paperwork done.

According to a handout from the TRICARE service center, newborns or newly adopted children are automatically covered in TRICARE Prime for the first 120 days from birth or date of adoption.

To ensure coverage is continued past the 120-day period, the first step is to enroll the child into DEERS as soon as possible.

According to the handout, in order to enroll into DEERS, the child's birth certificate and Social Security Number are needed at the Military Personnel Flight. Wait 24 to 48 hours after updating DEERS before enrolling a child in prime. Once DEERS system has been updated, the child can be enrolled online at www.triwest.com. A TRICARE Prime enrollment application can be completed in person at the TRICARE Service Center or by calling 1-888-874-9378.

If not enrolled in Prime by the 121st day, the child will be automatically switched to TRICARE Standard coverage and will incur the appropriate cost-shares and deductibles.

New and expectant parents can receive more information by visiting the family advocacy office located on the second floor of the Medical Group Annex, building 4220 or by calling 228-2104.

gives you a greater appreciation for others and for yourself. You may go through an entire day without a single smile or positive customer comment, but when you knock on the door and see the smile of genuine appreciation from these folks you know you are doing the right thing by your fellow Americans."

In addition to making a contribution to the community, the wing staff's involvement in the Mobile Meals program also benefits the Air Force.

"This volunteer program helps develop responsibility and commitment in our Airmen as well as a sense of satisfaction and accomplishment after you deliver the meals," said Colonel Eisenstadt.

"The entire Mobile Meals volunteer program is built on trust, accountability and responsibility. If any part of the team doesn't deliver, the entire program breaks down. These traits are also crucial in combat. Regardless of the combat or combat support role we perform, if one part of the team doesn't deliver the mission will fail."

In the case of the Mobile Meals program, if the drivers do not deliver in their mission, the homebound clients will not eat. While that is a significant responsibility, it is one those involved in the program are ready and willing to accept.

"A lady asked me yesterday why I was doing this and I told her 'to help support those who are supporting the military everyday and need help themselves,'" said Sergeant Gygi. "In hectic day-to-day living many people don't take the time or have the time to slow down and see their efforts are all important to everything that happens within this county," said Sergeant Gygi.

While the goal for the 355th Wing is to support the program through July, intendent, had an opportunity to share his story of dedication and patriotism with an Airman who was injured fighting the war on terror.

Support

Airman 1st Class Scott Palomino, 603rd Air Control Squadron located at Aviano Air Base, Italy was wounded when a mortar round exploded in his tent during his tour in Iraq. The attack resulted in the amputation of his leg below the knee. During his recovery, Airman Palomino decided that he was not ready to leave the Air Force.

"I want to stay in," Airman Palomino said to Air Force Print News. "And a lot of people tell me they don't think it will be a problem."

When Lt. Gen. Dan Leaf, Air Force Space Command vice commander, planned a trip to visit Airman Palomino, he contacted Sergeant Gibson to accompany him in order to share his personal story.

"General Leaf wanted to visit [the Airman] to pledge his support. He also thanked Airman Palomino and told him he would do everything possible to help him stay in the service," said Sergeant Gibson. "My goal was to share information about the board process and try to provide inspiration as he deals with his loss."

Like the recovering Airman, Sergeant Gibson had suffered an injury during a motorcycle accident causing him to lose part of a leg. After the accident he made a commitment to himself that he would stay in the Air Force.

"Immediately following the loss of my leg I thought I would have to separate. Everyone I spoke with in the medical field told me to expect medical discharge because at the time we didn't have any active-duty enlisted personnel stay in the service after having an amputation. I was at 12 years of service and loved life in the Air Force. I simply wasn't ready to leave. I had a great job and the Air Force provided a good way of life for me and my family. I felt I could still do my job and I wanted to prove it. With some encouragement and support from my supervisor, my squadron, group commanders and our wing commander (General Leaf) I decided to meet the formal medical board and fight to stay in," said Sergeant Gibson.

Through out the process Sergeant Gibson said, "The support I received from the Air Force community was absolutely incredible."

"Everyone from the wing commander down seemed personally interested in helping with my recovery. I was never alone as I went through this ordeal and I never had to worry about my loved ones. I can't begin to explain how much all of this meant to me. It reaffirmed my belief that the Air Force does take care of its people, and I wanted to stay part of that family," said Sergeant Gibson.

After making the decision to remain in the Air Force, Sergeant Gibson felt it was necessary for him to achieve the same deployment standards as the other Airmen. "I did not want any medical deferrals when it came to deploying," he said. "I felt it was important that I maintain deployable status. I'm just like everyone else ... when it's my turn I go."

Another goal he had during his visit with Airman Palomino was to reenlist, he said. "General Leaf took personal interest in seeing that I was returned to duty. He did a video teleconference with the formal board and really fought to keep me in. I've never forgotten that, and I've always hoped that one day he might be the one to do my reenlistment. He did this for me at Walter Reed in the Physical Therapy Ward and asked Airman Palomino to witness. It was incredibly emotional for me."

While the goal of the visit was to show Airman Palomino members of the Air Force community were ready and willing to nurture him, others also benefited.

"I got so much more out of this opportunity than I expected and it was a highlight of my career. Unfortunately there are many Air Force and Army members in the ward with the same types of injuries as a result of the war. To see their positive attitudes and desire to overcome their physical challenges was an inspiration to me. They've sacrificed a lot for their country and are truly heroes," said Sergeant Gibson.

Veterinary facility stresses summertime care for dogs

By Kathreen Peach

D-M Veterinary Treatment Facility

The Tucson summer is quickly approaching and while many enjoy the cool confines of air-conditioned homes or cooler activities, the Davis-Monthan Veterinary Treatment Facility would like to remind everyone about the proper care and nurturing of dogs during the hot summer months.

Outdoor dogs must have fresh, clean water available at all times while outside. Owners can buy automatic water dishes at pet stores. These dishes should be checked daily to ensure they are working properly and are clean. Animals can tip dishes over while playing and not have water while owners are at work. To avoid this, ensure bowls are secure and can't be knocked over. Placing a large rock in water buckets will keep it heavy so the animal cannot tip it over.

Additionally, outdoor dogs must have shade from the sun. Animals that are light in color can get sunburns if exposed to the sun for long periods of time without adequate shade or shelter.

Proper care of pets also includes getting their vaccinations. Puppies should receive vaccinations every three to four weeks beginning at six to eight weeks of age. They will complete their vaccinations at about four months of age. During this period, it is not advisable to take puppies to a dog park or for walks. Some of the diseases they may be exposed to stay in the ground for years. Once the initial vaccinations are complete, they require only annual vaccinations.

To help ensure a pet's health for many years it is recommended to have pets spayed or neutered. Animals that are not altered can develop cancer as they age. They may become aggressive towards other dogs and sometimes humans. They can also become a risk to the neighborhood. Additionally, having a pet altered helps reduce the growing problem of pet over population.

Another important reminder is that it is against the law to leave a dog inside a vehicle. Even with the windows rolled down the inside of the car reaches extreme temperatures very quickly. People who enjoy taking their dogs for rides can take them to the dog parks in town and pet stores. This helps keep dogs involved in going out with owners and their families. It also keeps dogs exposed to social settings.

There are many dog activities available in Tucson to keep dogs healthy and safe during the summer. The Humane Society can be contacted at 327-6088 to find out more about these programs.

Art signals jammer's role in OEF

By Master Sgt. Darrell Lewis
9th Air Expeditionary Task Force
Public Affairs

SOUTHWEST ASIA — A Southwest Asia afternoon sun provided warm light as Staff Sgt. John Alsvig painted a cartoon likeness of one of his unit's EC-130H Compass Call aircraft.

The art was featured in the middle of a concrete wall used to deflect propeller wash from tactical and special operations aircraft flying in and out of this forward location. The wall gave Sergeant Alsvig the canvas he needed to visually document his unit's pride and presence here. Sergeant Alsvig is a fuels system specialist deployed with the 41st Electronic Combat Squadron from Davis-Monthan Air Force Base.

The EC-130H is one of the many weapon systems in the U.S. Central Command area of responsibility that is actively engaged in the war on terrorism or poised to do so.

Dressed in shorts and a tank top after working his regular shift, Sergeant Alsvig touched up his painted rendition of the airborne electronic signal jammer. The EC-130H is a modified version of Lockheed's C-130 Hercules configured to perform tactical command, control and communications countermeasures against enemy forces. By bringing noise jamming to the fight, the crew prevents communication and degrades the transfer of information essential to enemy command and control of weapon systems and other military resources.

Sergeant Alsvig's artwork is his tribute to the aircraft and the 41st Expeditionary Electronic Combat Squadron. It is also at the centerpiece of a new version of the unit's original patch design that incorporates a rising sun background found on the existing 41st ECS patch.

Positioned along the rest of the almost football-field-length wall with Alsvig's work are the artwork of more than a dozen similarly talented unit artists whose work goes back a few years. Other newcomers are claiming space to make their own mark.

This art collection documents a unique part of the relatively short lineage of the Air Force's air and space expeditionary force concept.

Illustrated in his painting are the radio waves that send noise-jamming signals. Underscoring the bottom of the patch is the 41st EECS's blunt and concise combat motto: "In jam no one can hear you scream."

Understanding the seriousness of this mission, Sergeant Alsvig explains it this way: "You (the enemy) try to talk on the radio. You're trying to relay some information to somebody ... but you're getting jammed. Nobody can hear you (communicate further) because 'Ppwwfftt' ... it goes blank," he said. This is often followed by one of the more tangible effects of lethal airpower — a military strike by a bomb or missile and if there's time, a scream.

Staff Sgt. John Alsvig touches up his painting of an EC-130H on a mural documenting his unit's arrival on the frontlines of the war on terrorism. Sergeant Alsvig is a fuels system specialist from the 41st Expeditionary Electronic Combat Squadron at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base.

"It's all about projecting airpower and protecting our troops that are out there," he said. "That's how (Compass Call crews) take care of the good guys. That's pretty darn important when it comes to making sure the (aircraft) come home. I mean, you've got surface-to air (missiles), anti-aircraft artillery, other stuff trying to shoot them down. (We are) taking out that capability, so it's pretty damn important."

The seven-year Air Force veteran from San Jose, Calif., said he has been drawing since his mother encouraged him to try something other than tracing coloring book animals.

"I remember asking my mom,

"What's your favorite animal?" and flipping through my coloring book and finding (a horse) and tracing it. She knew I traced it and asked me 'Well, why don't you try looking at the animal in the coloring book and then drawing it?'"

Those early drawings he proudly presented to his mother gave him the confidence to keep practicing and to gain even more notice for his skill. During his military career, he has used what he calls his hobby to design other patches for units and coins.

"I'm really into the heritage and lineage that goes along with the squadrons. It's cool getting into the history," he said.

Sergeant Alsvig has redesigned another similarly exaggerated A-10 Thunderbolt II for a sister unit from Davis-Monthan.

Got questions? Air Force creates new resource for answers

By 2nd Lt. Beth Tucker
355th Wing Public Affairs

Taking care of Airmen has been expanded for all Air Force members through the 24-hour-a-day "Air Force One Source" live helpline.

"Air Force One Source is accessible 24-hours-a-day, seven-days-a-week, 365-days-a-year," said Jack Bianco, 355th Mission Support Group, director of the family support center.

The "beyond-the-gate" support and referral service is intended to help address personal and family support needs for active-duty Airmen, reservists and guardsmen. Some Airmen are not always near agencies that offer support with child care, finances, legal matters and other related issues. Certified counselors will be available to answer questions, provide information or guide Airmen and their family members to the appropriate resources. Some of the topics for assistance are: emergency preparedness, military family life, preparing or dealing with deployments, permanent changes of station, management tips and tools, financial guides for personal budgets and more.

The intent of the program is to ensure all Airmen and their families have the right resources they need, said Linda Smith, chief of Air Force family matters at the Pentagon.

"Air Force One Source will give them access to support at all times by telephone, internet and e-mail," said Ms. Smith.

The Air Force One Source provides access to many of the same types of information available at the family support center, but allows for remote access augmenting the traditional on-base services.

"Members can call or e-mail requests for information from wherever they are, at any time on any subject and receive an answer as soon as the research is completed," said Mr. Bianco.

The Air Force One Source staff, contracted through Titan/Ceridian Corp., has nearly 30 years of experience handling geographically dispersed employee calls from Fortune 100 companies. Counselors with licensed clinical social work and employee-assistance certifications, as well as advanced counseling degrees, will respond to Air Force One Source user's questions.

Air Force One Source is available anytime toll free by phone in the United States at (800) 707-5784, internationally at (800) 707-57844 or call collect at (484) 530-5913. In addition to anytime personal assistance on the phone, a Web site has been established at www.airforceonesource.com. Customers can log on by using "airforce" as the user ID and "ready" as the password.

Working together accomplishes the mission

By Lt. Col. Sallee Britton

355th Medical Operations Squadron commander

Supervisors love a "superstar" performer. This is the person with limitless energy, boundless enthusiasm and who gets it all done with ease every single time. You can count on this person 100 percent. However, when you look at all the members in your organization, how many of these superstars do you have? For the majority of projects and to get multiple tasks accomplished and be a successful, productive organization, you need to rely on the teamwork and combined efforts of everyone, not just the accomplishments of that superstar.

A famous quote from Ralph Waldo Emerson says it well; "No member of a crew is praised for the rugged individuality of his rowing."

Teamwork has always been vital in the military, and it's one of the primary skills to succeed in the business world.

Of course, teamwork is a basic skill for just getting along in life. One of the biggest advantages of teamwork is that you don't have to do all the work yourself. Everyone wins when a team member does well. It's called synergy; or in other words, the sum of the parts is greater than the whole.

Are you considered a team player? Some of the key abilities required of a good team player include trust, patience, respect for others, cooperation and organization. Are you able to listen to other people's arguments and points of view or are you frequently interrupting with your own thoughts and agenda? Do you stay the course or need to be brought back to the main focus repeatedly? Can your team count on you? If you don't work and play well with others, your usefulness to the team and unit becomes limited.

And remember, low motivation is more infectious on teams than high motivation. The team is only as strong as the weakest link.

Leaders do not achieve success all by themselves. It takes teamwork. An excellent, involved leader will foster teamwork in their units. To ensure successful teamwork and synergy, the leader has to give up some power to the team. Shared power results in higher job satisfaction and performance in that organization. The leader must also set the team off in the right direction. Ensure the team members know what you want done, relay clear instructions to the team, set deadlines, provide the necessary resources as well, follow up periodically, resist the temptation to take over and most important, reward team members for a job well done.

If you can blend the skills, talents, education, training and strengths of individuals into a single unit you've created a functioning team. As a leader, are you going to foster teamwork and involve all your staff or let a couple superstars carry the entire load?

A quote from Vince Lombardi sums it up well ... "Individual commitment to a group effort – that is what makes a team work, a company work, a society work, a civilization work."

Staff Sgt. Tammie Clark

Staff Sgt. Sueanne Alumbaugh, 355th Operations Support Squadron, controls local aircraft from the Davis-Monthan Air Traffic Control Tower.

Sonoran Spotlight

(Editor's note: Sonoran Spotlight is a weekly feature of the Desert Airman that profiles a member (officer, enlisted or civilian) of the Davis-Monthan Air Force Base Desert Lightning community. Members are nominated by their unit commander or first sergeant.)

This week's Sonoran Spotlight nominee is Staff Sgt. Sueanne Alumbaugh from the 355th Operations Support Squadron. Sergeant Alumbaugh is an Air Traffic Controller specialist. According to her supervisor, she was nominated for the spotlight because, "She has shown initiative to train new Air Traffic Controllers, constantly helps out in the office and is currently working on getting her Community College of the Air Force degree. Anytime we ask Sergeant Alumbaugh to do something, she never complains."

The following are Sergeant Alumbaugh's responses to a variety of questions.

Hometown: Jackson, Michigan

Reason for joining the Air Force: I joined the Air Force to serve my country and get an education without having student loans.

Main responsibilities: My main job responsibilities are to expedite the safe and efficient operation of aircraft. Separating aircraft from other aircraft and getting them where they need to go safely and expeditiously.

Best aspect of job: Job satisfaction. When we (the tower as a team) launch all the aircraft expeditiously in time to do their missions and when the aircraft return to the base, getting them all on the ground safely I feel satisfied.

Career goals: I would like to become a controller in the Federal Aviation Administration.

Hobbies/outside activities: I enjoy shopping, scrap booking, bowling, playing pool and hanging out with friends.

Favorite thing about D-M: I like Davis-Monthan because of the weather and the people that I work with.

Best assignment: Well, D-M has been my only assignment so I would say D-M because of all the people I have met and because of the warm weather.

Inspiration: My dad, George McGonegal, is my inspiration because he works very hard to get what he wants. He also does whatever he has to do to take care of his family.

Retain your rank and retirement benefits.

Once you've decided to leave the military, think about going above and beyond with a part-time job in the Air Force Reserve. In most cases, you'll retain your rank and continue to accrue retirement benefits. To learn more, go to www.afreserve.com/prior or call 800-AFR-8279.

Fighting the fight with the power of knowledge

Target ability to survive and operate skills

When a person is injured

Self Aid Buddy Care

- ◆ Establish an open Airway
- ◆ Ensure Breathing
- ◆ Stop bleeding to support Circulation
- ◆ Prevent further disability
- ◆ Place dressing over open wounds and secure with bandage
- ◆ Always immobilize neck injuries and avoid unnecessary movement
- ◆ Splint obvious limb deformities as they are found
- ◆ Minimize further Exposure to adverse weather

Symptoms of shock

- ◆ Confusion- can't answer simple questions
- ◆ Cold, clammy skin
- ◆ Profuse sweating
- ◆ Breathing shallow, labored and rapid
- ◆ Rapid pulse
- ◆ Anxiety or restlessness
- ◆ Thirsty or dry mouth
- ◆ Nausea or vomiting

Treating Shock

- ◆ Make sure to keep airway open
- ◆ If unconscious, place on side and monitor airway (watch for vomit)
- ◆ Keep the person calm, warm and comfortable
- ◆ To help with circulation, elevate lower extremities
- ◆ Seek medical attention immediately
- ◆ Do not allow them to eat or drink

Mission-Oriented Protective Postures

Mission-Oriented Protective Posture levels for ground forces are protection options. These options allow commanders to balance protection requirements and performance degradation with mission requirements. MOPP levels are always used together with alarm conditions to quickly increase or decrease individual protection against nuclear, biological, chemical and conventional threats.

MOPP Zero
Inspect issued Individual Protective Equipment, prepare it for donning.

Abdominal wound

- ◆ If organs are outside body, do not replace organs into the body
- ◆ Make sure to cover exposed organs with moist clean dressing
- ◆ Secure with bandages
- ◆ Apply direct pressure with hand; using a dressing if available
- ◆ Elevate the extremity if no fractures are suspected
- ◆ Do not remove dressing
- ◆ Add more dressing over old if needed

Bleeding

Eye injury

- ◆ Do not remove any impaled objects
- ◆ Dress around object to secure it
- ◆ In order to immobilize the injured eye, apply a bandage lightly to both eyes
- ◆ Do not leave patient unattended
- ◆ Keep the victim calm

Spinal, neck, or head injury

Symptom: Lack of feeling and/or control anywhere below the neck

Treatment if victim can remain stationary:

If conscious, caution victim not to move. Check airway without turning victim's head. Immobilize the head and neck.

If victim must be moved: Use hard surface for litter (door, cut lumber, other). Use as many people as needed to place victim on litter. One person must immobilize the head and neck at all times. Everyone must work together to turn whole body together, as one unit.

Do not bend spinal cord or rotate head or neck.

Symptom: Sucking noise from the chest, frothy red blood from wound

Treatment: Look for entry and exit wound; Cover holes with airtight seal (tin foil, ID card); tape down three sides, leave bottom uncovered; allow victim to assume position easiest for breathing

Two Davis-Monthan soccer players score gold for Air Force

By Stephanie Ritter
355th Wing Public Affairs

When the 2004 Armed Forces Women's Soccer Championship ended May 14, two members of the Desert Lightning Community walked away showing they have what it takes to be champions.

Members of the Air Force Women's Soccer Team, Capt. Heidi Commins, 43rd Electronic Combat Squadron, and 1st Lt. Jayne Baker, 563rd Maintenance Squadron, helped lead the Air Force team to a victory over the all Army and combined Navy and Marine teams.

The final championship score was 2-0-2, said Captain Commins. "We beat the Navy/Marine team twice and tied the Army team twice."

According to the Department of Defense Sportslink, the Air Force team clinched the gold through Armed Forces Sports tie-breaker rules which uses point differential to decide ties.

Finally winning the hard fought battle took a combination of teamwork and dedication; something both have learned from their Air Force jobs, they said.

"It's great to meet people from different parts of the service and really build a team in such a short period of time to compete at a high level of competition," said Lieutenant Baker.

Comprised of members stationed around the world, the Air Force team went through three weeks of training at Patrick Air Force Base, Fla., before competing at the Armed Forces Championship.

"To meet so many successful Air Force women from various career fields was invaluable," said Captain Commins. "It was a team full of female role models with amazing backgrounds."

The combination of a strong team and competitive nature of the players lead to a positive atmosphere surrounding the championship.

"There is a great rivalry amongst the services and it's always great to win the gold medal," said Lieutenant Baker. "I love to compete. I never thought I'd have a chance to continue playing competitively after graduating from college."

In addition to being a part of the Women's Air Force soccer team, both Captain Commins and Lieutenant Baker were selected for the All Armed Forces Tournament Team. The team is considered to be an All Star Team and is comprised of the best players from each of the three teams that competed during the 2004 Armed Forces Championship.

Education Services

Air Force Virtual Education Center

The AFVEC is a Web based system available to military members that can save a trip to the education center for certain things. Military members with accounts can now update personal data including rank, duty phone, e-mail and current address. New features allow users to view a complete history of their enrollment in courses taken using Tuition Assistance. Users can also access a list of notifications concerning missing grades and payment suspense and check Defence Activity for Non-traditional Education Support and college level examination placement test results. Viewing Community College of the Air Force progress reports and sending CCAF transcripts are also available. From a military computer, sign up for an account at <https://afvec.langley.af.mil>.

Scholarship search

Servicemembers, veterans and dependents can now search for education scholarships that fit their particular needs at <http://www.military.com/Education/ScholarShip/newsearch>. The improved Scholarship Search system contains over 1,000 scholarships worth millions of dollars and includes details on individual scholarship eligibility, monetary amount and deadlines.

Excelsior College

Excelsior College is seeking nominations for the 2003 Catherine Craig-Erhardt Award. Eligibility is for any active-duty service member, National Guard member or Reservist. A veteran who was on active duty during most of the period of enrollment in Excelsior College is also eligible. Nominees must be members of the current year's Excelsior College graduating class. The academic year for this purpose includes degree conferrals from July 2002 to June 2003. Deadline is

June 1. For more information, call Susan Dewan at 1-888-647-2388.

Family Support Center

Hearts Apart Day at the Zoo

Movies begin at 7 p.m. unless otherwise noted. Admission is $3 for adults and $1.50 for children under 12 and senior citizens. Admission is for DoD ID card holders and their guests only. For the theater movie recording, call 228-5694.

Friday: Ladykillers (R)

An eccentric professor-turned-criminal has a plot to heist a New Orleans riverboat casino. But when the plan appears to be thwarted by the actions of Mrs. Munson, the seemingly-innocent landlady of the house that is a part of his scheme, he and his cohorts decide they need to remove the landlady from the equation. However, doing so might prove to be difficult. 1 hour, 44 minutes

Saturday: The Prince and Me (PG)

Paige, a free-spirited American college student, falls in love with one of her classmates, Frederick. What she doesn't know is that he's a Danish prince spending a year abroad before having to perform his princely duties. Paige is forced to choose between what she thought her dreams were and the new dreams Frederick teaches her to have. 1 hour, 51 minutes

Sunday: Jersey Girl (PG-13)

Ollie Trinke is married to the love of his life with a child on the way. But when tragedy strikes, he finds himself single and forced to move in with his own father in the New Jersey Suburb where he was raised. With the help of a friend who opens him up to love again, and the daughter who gives him the courage to keep going, he begins to realize that sometimes, you have to forget about what you thought you were and just accept who you are. 1 hour, 43 minutes

CDC openings for ages 1 to 5

The Child Development Centers currently have openings for full time childcare for children ages 1 to 5 years. The centers are open from 6:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Mondays through Fridays. Fees are based on a sliding scale using total family income, basic allowance for housing and basic allowance for subsistence. Priority is given to single and dual active duty members.

The CDCs are accredited by the National Association for the Education of Young Children and receive over 50 inspections every year from Air Force, public health, safety, fire prevention and multidisciplinary teams consisting of various experts. Teachers are certified yearly on cardiopulmonary resuscitation and first aid and receive security background checks. They also receive mandatory training on child development and curriculum based on developmentally appropriate practices.

Parents must stop by the CDC to fill out the necessary paperwork and deposit $50 to hold a slot for two weeks. When a child starts the deposit is credited to the balance of the first payment. Those not interested in a full time child care slot can contact Maryann Newman at 228-6160 or 228-6465.

Ceramic shop volunteers

The Davis-Monthan Arts and Crafts Center Ceramics Shop has everything needed to make ceramic figures. Come by and select a greenware piece or bring in one from any of the local Tucson, Ariz. stores. HOMELAND HEROES

You are the American spirit.

When needed, you answered the call to serve your Nation. And even when you return to civilian life, your service to your community and country will still matter. You can continue to serve by becoming a member in your hometown Air Force - the Air National Guard.

In return for your part-time service, the Air National Guard will

- Count time served on active duty toward your Air Guard retirement
- Recognize the military rank you held at time of active duty discharge
- Offer additional training in your field or a completely new career
- Provide eligibility for the VA Home Loan Program
- Reinstate many of your active duty military benefits

Enter a new era of military service.
